They dissolve sparingly in cold water, very sparingly in cold alcohol, more easily in hot alcohol. The sodium-salt forms yellow, silky needles, which dissolve pretty easily in water. The barium-salt, $C_2H_3Ba(NO_3)_2 \cdot 6H_2O$ crystallises in thick, roseate, six-sided oblique prisms and needles, with two angles of the lateral edges of 89, and four of 136 30. In vacuo, at ordinary temperatures, they give off 6-6 per cent. (2 at.) and at 100 altogether, 15-42 per cent. (6 at) water. The ammonium-salt mixed with chloride of strontium, the solutions being hot and concentrated, soon forms silky needles, with chloride of calcium, granules consisting of needles; with alum, needles. It does not precipitate the salts of magnesium, iron, zinc, cadmium, cobalt, nickel, or copper, or mercuric salts. Dinitrophenate of Cobalt forms brown-yellow, right rectangular prisms, with dihedral summits. Its brown aqueous solution forms with ammonia a yellow precipitate which melts and detonates when heated. The copper-salt crystallises in yellow silky needles, whose yellow solution forms with ammonia, yellow needles sparingly soluble in ammonia or in water. Lead-salt.--The neutral salt has not been obtained. A lead salt, $2C_2H_3Pb(NO_3)_2$, is formed on pouring a boiling alcoholic solution of the acid into a moderately concentrated boiling alcoholic solution of neutral acetate of lead, and crystallises on cooling in spherical groups of microscopic needles having a fine yellow colour. Another basic salt, $C_2H_3Pb(NO_3)_4 \cdot 4H_2O$, is obtained on pouring dinitrophenate of ammonium into a...
