FIRST visited Lincoln, in Lancaster County, the capital of Nebraska, when it was a six-year-old, and a decidedly nice, neat-looking town I found it. It boasts of a population of about 7,000, and it has a number of edifices with some pretensions to architectural beauty. Three railroads have stations here; and one, the Burlington and Missouri (in popular parlance the B. and M.), has a budding called The Emigrants Home, where rooms and conveniences for cooking, washing, c., are supplied free of charge for such limited time as the circumstances will permit, while the occupants are looking for homes and employment. The people who use this building are of course expected to rough it; for no railway company, however opulent, would find it politic or profitable to provide luxurious quarters under such circumstances. The Capitol building is a...
