Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States: Commandery of the District of Columbia In the autumn of 1862 the United States steam gunboat Miami, after having done picket duty on the James river, was ordered from Hampton Roads to the Sounds of North Carolina. The Miami had been built somewhat hastily at the Navy Yard, Philadelphia, and was, I believe, the first to be launched of a class of double-enders, so called. She was a large paddle-wheel steamer, with, a long flush deck, and furnished with steering gear and a rudder at the bow as well as stern, so that she would run forward or backward, an important advantage in river service, for which this class of light-draught vessels was designed. As a matter of fact it turned out that she ran much better stern foremost. Her capacity for taking a sheer was phenomenal. Before I was ordered to her as an Acting Assistant Paymaster she had been with Porters mortar fleet below New Orleans. Here she managed to inspire almost as...
